Evolutionaries

The history of the world has been filled with extraordinary heroes. But hidden within our race were the Evolutionaries or EVs (slang). The EVs got their powers from genetic mutation caused by the GIA energy that our planet spits out with every volcanic eruption and natural explosion. Over the last few hundred years, human DNA has spawned a strain that reacts to GIA energy, hence a whole race evolving. Unlike the humans activated by Cartel, the EV is ready to rock and roll at birth. They are the next step in human evolution. Most powers manifest themselves in the EV's youth. Considered freaks of nature by normal man, they mask themselves from the real world and live a life of guilt and shame. As the Age of the Guardian emerged, some of them came out of hiding while others went to work for 3rd world nations. When the Shifters took control, the EVs became hunted in secret by the Regis. Seeing no other choice, the EV population began to organize. Secret societies, clandestine operations, and covert schools became more prevalent. Since every other super being on Earth had their own niche, it was important for the EVs to build their numbers. By 2010 they were ready to come out in force. But a simple child destroyed their plan and a cosmic threat guaranteed their place as the next generation of true heroes on a targeted Earth.

Bloodline

Bloodline

The most wanted underground network of EVs in the world is the Bloodline. Originally formed by Charles Freelance as part of a research think-tank for EVs, it went rogue after their founder vanished. Their base of operations in France was destroyed by Shifters and now they wonder the globe meeting in private and increasing their numbers. The one person who keeps everything working is a former Freelance International operative who goes by the name King. With the help of other Evs, he has managed to train a small force to help fight the Shifters. King refers to this team as his 'Knights'. Some are everyday people while others are truly badass military EVs who saw a better side to things. King also maintains several schools across the world that train young EVs to use their powers. To help aid King is a psychic named Spotter, who has the ability to sense EVs from up to a thousand miles away. When out on missions, King is always accompanied by Liftoff and Loxley, two combat savvy EVs. Bloodline's main base of operations is a marooned Imperium cruiser in the Congo that still has power and Teleporters (70 Rank). It also can scramble scan signals, allowing Bloodline to work undetected by world superpowers and aliens. The ship is usually manned by King's inner circle. Each member of Bloodline's upper ranks is given a Tele-Watch, which works just like the old UK Guardian Tele-Harnesses. If a member is in trouble, they may activate the watch and teleport back to the Congo. It's a one shot deal. The big rule of Bloodline is to never get caught with your pants down. King checks in with the schools daily. If something seems remotely wrong he sends a team to investigate. King is at the top of his game.

King

Real Name: Trey King

Age: 39

Weight: 213 lbs

Height: 6ft

Eyes: Hazel

Hair: N/A

Place of Birth: Salem, Massachusetts, USA

Legal Status: US Citizen

Occupation: Former Freelance International Security Operator, Head of Project: Bloodline, Bloodline Team Leader

Trey King was the son of a traveling nurse and a brilliant doctor. At the age of twelve, his parents were killed when the ship they were working on was sunk by a Russian submarine off the coast of Greenland. The real explanation was scrubbed by the US government, but Trey knew the truth. After that he was sent to live with his uncle who was a genetic expert working for the then Freelance Company. Here Trey got a top notch education in genetics and engineering. During a routine inspection of his labs, Charles Freelance met the young Trey. Seeing all the potential, Charles put Trey in charge of a new project called Bloodline. The mission was to study the super human gene cells and see if there was a direct connection. What Charles didn't know was that Trey was one of these beings, something Trey wasn't even sure about himself. The truth came out during a terrorist attack on his lab when Trey tried going toe to toe with Bonecrusher. The young scientist punched the Rogue and in that instant instead of breaking his hand like he should have, Trey absorbed the kinetic energies. On his next punch, Bonecrusher actually got knocked back. Trey's luck didn't hold out, however. Bonecrusher ripped the young scientist's right arm off and left him for dead. Using his best technology, Charles replaced Trey's arm with a cybernetic one that worked in sync with his powers. He also sent Trey to train with Ogre, Freelance Company's security chief. By the time Freelance Company changed to Freelance International, Trey was totally ready for any combat situation. He took his place back at Project: Bloodline and continued his research. It was here that he discovered that outside of the normal 'powered' beings on Earth, there was an actual cell that had evolved past the normal cells that created the mass growth in 1975. Using his own DNA, Trey realized that he along with hundreds of others were part of a new evolutionary cycle. He dubbed them and himself: Evolutionaries. The week before he could present his data to Charles Freelance, the Island 4 disaster happened. Trey kept the research classified within company records and waited to see what would happen next. Freelance International found itself under new management shortly afterword and Trey took his research, hidden funds and went rogue. Trey located a young EV named Spotter and began gathering other EVs. He set up several private institutions for EV youth under the guise of Prep Schools. Using Freelance International satellites, Trey tracked down a downed Imperium ship in the Congo. He quickly took control of it and formed a team of EVs naming it Bloodline. Today Trey goes by the name 'King'. He spends most of his time monitoring global intelligence networks and working with SpyCorps to bring down the Shifter threat. On the side he manages his schools and tracks down dangerous EVs before they expose the truth about Evolutionaries. King has become close friends with several EVs and works hard to maintain a working unity among others like himself.

Bloodline

King is a compassionate leader who can go cold in a second. He doesn't tolerate betrayal and he has no problem getting into the trenches to get the work done. He loves working with children and protects the younger EVs in his charge like they were his own. King also requires basic military training for anyone who is going to be doing field work.

Spotter

Real Name: Tommy Greene

Age: 17

Weight: 137 lbs

Height: 5ft

Eyes: White

Hair: Auburn

Place of Birth: Burbank, California USA

Legal Status: US Citizen, Juvenile Criminal Record

Occupation: Bloodline EV Tracker

Tommy Green was just a kid trying to live the American dream; skipping school, shoplifting, and lounging at the local beach. He did it so well that his parents shipped him off to a 'special' prep school for troubled teens. What they didn't know was that their son was actually 'gifted'. Tommy had the ability to detect others like him, which left him constantly spacey and distracted. At the King Institute for Teens, or KIT, Tommy met Trey King and their friendship began. King taught Tommy how to focus his ability and give actual coordinates by reading maps. All it took was King pulling up a map of California for Tommy to locate his first EV. The life of an EV tracker isn't easy though. King had to train Tommy to defend himself after what was supposed to be a simple retrieval turned south when a strike team of John Does attacked and almost kidnapped the young EV. It was that event that brought about the Tele-Watch.

Tommy is still pretty spacey. He spends his days hanging out in the briefing room playing video games and ping pong with Lift-Off. Tommy loves his new life, but always dreads that next mission where they actually need him there. The encounter with the John Does has left its mark.

Lift-Off

Real Name: Luis Pepperjack

Age: 32

Weight: 232 lbs

Height: 6ft 2

Eyes: Blue

Hair: N/A

Place of Birth: Hooper's Town, Kentucky USA

Legal Status: US Citizen

Occupation: Former Navy SEAL, Bloodline Field Operative

Luis Pepperjack came from a long line of Navy sailors dating back to the Revolutionary War. It was only right that he sign up to have some fun. Skipping out on a fully paid basketball scholarship, Luis went Navy SEALs instead. His father was devastated. While on a mission to Kuwait, Luis and his team were ambushed during a border crossing into Iraqi. Everyone was killed but Luis, who was taken prisoner. After getting softened up by his captors, Luis was put in front of a camera while someone stood behind him with a large knife. His heart began to pound and Luis leapt up and right through the roof of the building, but instead of coming down, Luis kept on flying through the air. The Iraqis opened fire on him and the bullets seemed to bounce off. With no real knowledge of where he was, the Navy SEAL just kept flying in one direction, right into Iran. The Iranian air force caught up with Luis, but he literally flew right through one of their jets. After a long day of non-stop flight Luis landed on a mountain and just sat there, amazed at his powers. He had read about Guardians and was fully briefed on super powers, but to actually have them was a whole other thing. That night Trey King teleported in and offered to get Luis back to the Kuwait border or he could leave the SEALs and join Bloodline. Not wanting to be alienated by regular people, Luis joined up with Trey and became a field operative. His mission would be to go out and retrieve EVs and also be a salesperson for the King Institute for Teens. After some string pulling with SpyCorps, Luis was released from his SEAL obligations, leaving him free to travel in the United States.

Luis is a pretty fun guy when not on missions. He has taken to Spotter and really begun to enjoy the life he now leads. He took the codename Lift-Off because every time he takes off the ground beneath him dusts up like it would under a rocket. When on missions, however, Luis is tactic savvy and knows how to make the best impact.

I'm not gay. Yes, I do wear something that looks like spandex, but last time I tore off into the sky my clothes got shredded. At least this way I don't end up naked. Loxley

Real Name: Rob Loxley

Age: 22

Weight: 173 lbs

Height: 5ft 8

Eyes: Green

Hair: Black

Place of Birth: Prince Edward's Island, Canada

Legal Status: Canadian Citizen

Occupation: Former Olympic Archer, Bloodline Field Operative

Sometimes it's all in the name. Rob Loxley was Canada's premiere Olympic archer. He had received a gold medal every year over a five year spread. Rob's family lived in luxury because of their son's fame. Their family estate was loathed by other islanders. So much that some conspired to make him the laughing stock of the 2008 Summer Olympics. While warming up for his turn, Rob was confronted by several strongmen who threatened to hurt his family if he scored a gold. Under pressure, Rob took his place to shoot. He could see in the stands his family and behind them the men who made the threat. The pressure began to build and before he knew it, the arrow was released and heading towards the strongmen. But instead of a clean strike, the arrow exploded on impact taking out the entire area. Rob was in shock and terrified at what he had done. He was quickly taken into custody and it there that he learned his family had been killed by the explosion. The official press release was that terrorists had struck at the Olympics and Rob was under arrest for not disclosing he knew about the pending attack and did nothing to warn authorities. While he sat in jail, Rob was visited by Trey King and a man named Ghost. They offered up a deal: join Bloodline or join StormCorps. Liking Trey's approach better, he joined Bloodline. It was here that Rob learned the truth. It was Rob that caused the explosion because his arrow had been transformed into energy by his EV powers. Rob couldn't believe it, but Trey showed him the raw video and it was very clear. Rob went into shock and spent a year working out what he had done while in isolation at a StormCorps prison. When he finally came around, Rob was ready to learn more. Trey educated Rob on his powers and showed him what good could come from his pain. In the end Rob took on the name Loxley, after the classic hero Robin Hood. He became a field operative and works hard to prevent anyone else from going through what he did.

Rob is a quiet man. When on missions he is calculated and deadly. He prefers to stick to his archery as his primary form to use his powers, but when need be he will transform anything that is handy. At the Congo base he spends his time reading self-help books and continues to try and come to terms with what he did.
