If there is one thing Daniel Forton, the former Vice President of Krypton International, hated was being overthrown by a stinking alien. With a sizable cache of money, he fled to Afghanistan to work out a plan for revenge. He assisted the Taliban in creating a new series of Genetecs and then turned on his gracious hosts, taking control of the facility and setting up a new base of operations. His pride and joy was a new female Genetec which he dubbed Genetec Prime, because of her uniqueness. Unlike his other Genetecs, Prime was fully functional with no battle frenzy. She was practically super human. Prime was sent to England, where she infiltrated the old Guardian HQ and stole data on their old teleporter system. Forton quickly built his own version of a teleport system. With a great big smile he dispatched Prime to the Kyrton International's central office and let his creation loose on CST BlackBolt. But Prime wasn't one for taking orders or hurting innocents. When she realized how much of a bastard Forton was, Prime scrubbed the mission and went to work as a private mercenary for noble causes. She has done a lot of freelance work for SpyCorps, messing up Shifter operations. Every now and then she comes across one of Forton's creations and makes it a point to seriously mess it up.

Prime's personality is pretty cold. She was born for war, but has a soft spot for women and children. She is also a serious man-hater. Prime is quick to kick the butt of any male that might make a pass at her. She also doesn't talk much, other than needed conversation. She has a need to serve a just cause. It almost drives her.

Quotable: Make sure the money is deposited. Don't worry. The targets will get what they deserve.
