In another Guardian Universe, deep within the walls of GodTech, genetic engineers struggled for years to improve the design for a supreme being. Their attempts included Icon and Frankenberg. Prime was their last great creation before they swore off genetic engineering. Prime has DNA from dozens of powerful Guardians, with readjustments offering Prime the ultimate edge. GodTech even laced his genetic structure with magical properties, which mutated when they bombarded him with GIA energy. The end result was a perfect 'human' with uncanny abilities. When GodTech wanted to use Prime in the field, their creation refused and destroyed their laboratory where he was grown. Desperate to stop Prime, GodTech sent a special strike team to eliminate him. Prime was still young and was killed. But that didn't stop him. Prime rose from the grave even more powerful than before. Prime left Earth and traveled into deep space where he met NeCross, who used Prime against the Galactic Legion until he was killed again. Prime didn't stay dead for long and took revenge on the Galactic Legion, killing those responsible for his death. But Prime realized shortly afterwards that NeCross was true evil and had used him to achieve evil goals. Prime went to war with NeCross and by the end of the Black Galaxy War, the dark menace was banished. But Prime was enraged. His chance for revenge was stolen by the Cosmic Tribunal. He lashed out at them and Prime found himself annihilated by forces beyond anyone's comprehension. Elsewhere, in another Guardian Universe, a cosmic storm raged and at the heart of it a human-sized purple gem. When the energies faded, the gem drifted towards a lush jungle world and crashed. A world in the direct path of Thanatos. As the God Stones activated their Apocalypse mode, the gem shattered. From it came Prime. Rescued by unknown forces in his Guardian Universe and still agitated about NeCross, Prime was in no mood to deal with catastrophe. The natives of the jungle world approached Prime and begged him to not destroy their home. But Prime wasn't responsible for it and when he dismissed the pleas the natives attacked him. Millions of aliens threw themselves at Prime and hundreds at a time had their souls sucked from their bodies. By the time Thanatos arrived, the world was almost devoid of life. The daemon mocked Prime and that's when something changed. Prime realized that it was HE that was the monster. Dead children lay at his feet and above him an evil worse than NeCross stand there totally innocent. With tears in his eyes, Prime flew into space, leaving Thanatos to continue his galactic genocide. It took Prime months to regain his sanity. The depression he suffered was great. He had nothing to live for. But then the souls of the aliens he had murdered started to come to him in dreams. They encouraged Prime to turn everything around and to not let their deaths be in vain. Prime thought he was going mad at first, but then he realized that he was able to commune with anyone whom he had soul sucked. Using this ability, Prime was able to learn about this Guardian Universe. And if he needed more information, Prime just sucked their soul.

Prime is one of those beings that people want on their side, yet are always looking over their shoulders in case Prime decides to eat their souls. He is very impatient, which is why he tends to just suck souls instead of waiting for a more practical solution. His recent awareness has toned Prime down a little. But in the heat of battle he is quick to cut loose.
