

The Russian Liberation Force

Nothing was more of a shock than when a squadron of SRs got up on their own and started attacking a dry dock. The RLF at first wasn't sure what had happened, but through quick deduction realized that the Q-Chip was the big problem. Wasting no time, the engineers started removing the Hbot chip from all their mechs. But it was too late. The RLF fled their space docks and factories as Cybermorph units attacked and took control of all Q-Chip machines. It was a dark day for the once proud Russian Liberation Force. Yet, the RLF turned everything around. They set up base in the Pegasus system and began working on new STUBs and altering the SRs and BDs. The current RLF has been spread thin. Hundreds of engineers work day in and day out to fix the SR and BD forces. Others are scattered across the human expanse working with guerilla units in an attempt to bring down the Cybermorphs and find a way to restore Hbots that have been possessed. The greatest accomplishments to date have been the introduction of Commando STUBs and particle beam weapons, not to mention new Cannon Ships that fire a heavy pulse of particle and ionic energy capable of disabling entire ships.

Views on Other Organizations

GCC

-We're in the middle of a war and they are still hiding behind their shields. If they only would help we might survive this battle.

MORDUM

-Finally, some type of peace. It's good to see humans working together for the common good. Not to mention all the stuff MORDUM has been hoarding for the last decade, it makes it easier for us to advance our designs.

UEU

-They bailed us out and set up a new shop for us. As always, good friends till the end. The only complaint is they are working our fingers to the bone and we aren't even sure if we can give them the weapons they need.

Cybermorphs

-There is so much of their technology that we don't understand. Not to mention our innovation seems to have come from the same source as theirs. But we are smarter and we have inventions that those machine bastards don't have.

Hbots

-So much for that dream come true. They left us, not by choice, to fight an enemy that uses them as weapons. Go figure.

Xmorphs

-The 'cure'. That's what the UEU called it. Yet these things are still infecting their way across the human empire. Hopefully we can get that gene scanner finished.
